WASHINGTON:

THURSDAY AFTERNOON, OCTOBER 30. Holland-Its Physical Characteristics and its History. NUMBER THREE.

That the promise of Philip was not intended to be fulfilled, was evident from the fact that the governante received orders to proceed against heretics with the utmost severity. Upon this the people broke into open insurrection. It was the commonalty who, in the first instance, proceeded to these extremities; the principal inhabitants remained quiet. But a new oath of allegiance was exacted, and all persons were obliged to swear that they would regard as traitors and enemies to their country all whom the king should think proper to proscribe. A most cruel persecution ensued; the Duke of Alva was sent with an army of 10,000 men to put the last hand to the misery of the people, and to establish the despotism of the Court. Counts Egmont and Horn most imprudently took the above-mentioned oath; but the Prince of Orange spurned it, and retired into Germany with Counts Budenrade and Hoogstrate. Great numbers of all ranks and conditions followed their example. After the arrival of Alva and his army, such multitudes continued to emigrate, that the Duchess of Parma informed the king that within a few days 100,000 families had left his dominions; that soon, at this rate, she would have no people to govern ; and begged leave to resign before she should have the mortification and disgrace of being left alone in the Netherlands. The king immediately complied, and appointed as her successor the savage Duke of Alva. The king was a haughty and vengeful tyrant, with not a spark of compassion in his nature, and totally insensible to the calamities of the people. Alva was exactly like his master. The army under Alva was fierce, rapacious, and merciless, desiring nothing so much as to enrich themselves at the expense of the people. The whole country, under Alva, was filled with blood and horror; the Counts Egmont and Horn perished on the scaffold, and the estate of the Prince of Orange was confiscated. The people saw that resistance alone would end these infamies. They invited the prince to return, and place himself at their head for the purpose of systematic resistance.

The prince had previously been endeavoring, and also his brother Louis of Nassau, to form alliances in defence of the public liberties. Having made certain preparations, he re-entered the Low Countries. His first efforts were very unsuccessful. Louis of Nassau, however, defeated a body of Spaniards, and killed six hundred on the spot.

Alva, however, was a very able general. He concentrated his troops. Prince Louis and Count Hoogstrate retired before them. They were compelled to action by Alva, and totally defeated. Meantime, the Prince of Orange was hastening to the relief of his allies; but he was defeated, and Count Hoogstrate killed. His troops then deserted in such crowds that he was forced to disband his army and retire into Germany.

This disaster happened in 1569. The Duke entered Brussels in triumph, and continued executions against those known or supposed to favor the Prince of Orange. He projected the total extirpation of the reformed religion by the death of every one who professed it. All the prisoners in the last campaign were put to death. His plan was to erect citadels in all the towns; and he began with Amsterdam. He demanded the hundredth part of every man's estate to be paid immediately for the support of the army, besides the tenth of all the merchandise and the twentieth of immovables, to be levied annually as a standing revenue.

The Prince of Orange had not remained inactive, although compelled to leave the country. In 1571, the Duke of Alva was proceeding by violence to enforce the taxes, when news arrived of the surrender of Briel, in the island of Voorn, at the entrance of the Meuse, to a squadron of vessels fitted out by the Prince of Orange. Lumey, the commander, made a descent on the island from forty ships, destroyed the churches, broke the images, and executed the priests, but offered no violence to the other inhabitants. Alva was now under a necessity to desist from his intended taxation. He sent Maximilian Hermin Bossa against the insurgents. This officer, endeavoring to free Briel, was defeated. The Orange party also became masters of Delfhaven, on the Meuse. The Zealanders prosecuted with energy their much wealth as purchased a large store of arms numbers of English and Scotch adventurers, they ventured to attack the Duke of Medina Celi, who had been sent with a strong squadron to succeed the Duke of Alva in the government of the Netherlands. The duke was completely To augment his army in the field, the Duke of Alva had draughted most of the garrison. Spaniards in the towns, the friends of the open before him. Prince of Orange gained possession of North Holland; and Louis of Nassau, with the aid of the inhabitants, succeeded in surprising the Spanish in the city of Mons. Thus emboldened, most of the cities and towns.in the province of Holland declared against the government. In a word, the revolt became openly as general as the disposition to revolt had been secretly general before. The Duke of Alva found himself at our navy-yard will, it is supposed, be com-unable to resist the torrent. Even tyrants put pleted by the first of May. on a show of relenting under a stress of circumstances. He therefore relaxed by an edict in relation to taxes. He invoked the States Gentempt of his authority, assembled at Dordrecht, of iron. inviting deputies from the Prince of Orange, the nobility, and the towns that had declared against the Spaniards. Here money was raised to enable the Prince of Orange to begin his the king's revenues and church-tithes were ap- the Manassas Gap Railroad.

ropriated to the public service, but the estates of those who espoused the cause of the King of Spain. To sum up, in few words, the plans adopted, the most vigorous measures were pursued for resisting the tyranny of Spain; and those who had refused tithes to Spain voluntarily subscribed their all to support a party formed in defence of liberty.

Consul Owen Again!

Captain J. A. Kelly, of Cleveland, Ohio, and late of the Cuban Expedition, contradicts the statements contained in Consul Owen's letter to the Republic. He says that it is the most perfect collection of falsehoods he ever met with, and is only equalled in absurdity by the audacity of the man in thus attempting to justify his conduct through the American press; that he does not live four miles out of town, nor was he sick at the time referred to; that he did know in time of the arrest of Col. Crittenden and his party, and was sent for by them, and positively refused to see them, on the score that they were outlaws; and that the American, German, and English citizens resident in Havana will testify to this whenever called upon His assertion that the prisoners had been tried found guilty, and condemned, is a falsehood. When Captain Kelly reached the prison, he found eight or ten of his comrades there, and they all said that the Consul had not been to see them. He also sent, the same evening, by an American merchant at Havana, to Mr. Owen and he refused to come, saying that our Govern ment did not recognise them. When Capt. Platt, of the sloop-of-war Albany, visited the prison, Capt. K. sent to Mr. Owen by him, and he again refused to go. Then Lieut. Taylor, of the Albany, said he would "make him come," and the next morning Mr. Owen paid them a visit with Capt. Platt. As he went in, the Americans gathered around him, and for some reason he backed through the door, and held conversation with them with the grates intervening. Capt. K. then asked him to assist him in corresponding with his friends in the United States, but he refused!

The Postage Law.

The Intelligencer of this morning says that the fact is not to be disguised that the present high and complicated rates of postage on transient newspapers is a cause of general complaint with the public," and proceeds at length to defend the Department from an illiberal construction of the law. The law is, in our opinion, infinitely worse than that it supplanted, and should be promptly repealed; and whether the Postmaster General has misinterpreted this law or not, certain it is that if the bill of Mr. Durkee had not been thrown aside to meet the views expressed in the report of this functionary, the present evils would not be upon us.

As respects the interpretation of the law, let us not now dispute; for its repeal is one of the nearest of future events. We perceive that Barnabas Bates is again on duty, and we have confidence in his plans, in his ability to prosecute them, and in his zeal in the good work. We shall yet have cheap postage.

OUR CITY.-The near approach of Congress has made quite a stir with our hotels, boardinghouse keepers, and business men generally. All are looking forward with bright hopes, and flattering prospects of being amply remunerated for their toil and labor. Our merchants are determined to drive a profitable trade, and have spared no trouble in laying in large and fashionable stocks of goods, in all branches, suitable for the season and all its contingencies. Never, indeed, in our recollection, has Washington presented such a business-like aspect. Stroll along what street you please, and you will note preparations for some new edifice, or improvement of some kind. Our mechanics and working-men, in every branch of business, seem crowded and pressed with work and orders. Success attend them and us. Amen!

On dit-that the winds tell of a coming storm in Executive quarters—that the quotation from "Daniel Webster's letter to the Union meeting at Westchester," endorsing and eulogizing President Fillmore's message, will soon be removed from the editorial heads of the Fillmore papers-and that the Union stock of the present firm will be depreciated in the market, on the dissolution of the concern, and the resumption of business on his own account by the Union man of the nation-one HENRY CLAY, of Ken-

BOTTS AND SECESSION.-It is said that some of the Whigs of Richmond, when their choice cruises against the Spaniards, and obtained as lay between Botts and Secession, took the latter as the smaller evil. The Republican says that and ammunition at Antwerp. Joined by great "those Whigs who conquered their personal prejudices, and voted for Mr. Botts for the sake of the Union, will be gratified that they have not contributed to the joy of the enemies of the country." But Mr. Caskie is an able and a patriotic man, and we entertain the hope that defeated, a great number of his ships were those Whigs who refrained from voting, or voted taken, and a booty, amounting to nearly two for him, are well assured that his Buncombism hundred thousand dollars, was carried off by will not prove mischievous in the Capitol of the nation. He is ambitious, and will not choose to be a representative in the Congress of a little Southern Confederacy while the road to the Availing themselves of the weakness of the highest honors of this great nation is invitingly

HANDSOME CAR .- The splendid railroad pasmarch. His forces amounted to $15,000 foot senger car, from the establishment of C. Davand 7,000 horse. Not only Messrs. Smith and Perkins, of Alexandria, for A Genuine Bloomer

A young lady, from Warwick, New York, promenaded our city this morning in the Bloomer costume—a leghorn flat, green silk tunic, and white satin pants. She was in the company of a very respectable-looking gentleman and lady, (her brother and sister-in-law, we are informed.) She was the observed and the admired of many; for her appearance and carriage were dignified and beautiful, while her apparel was not marked by any excess of ornament. To the credit of our city be it spoken, no train followed her, and no impertiment talkers or starers did aught that could annoy

To the Editors of the American Telegraph.

GENTLEMEN: In an account given in the American Telegraph of last evening, of a meeting said to have taken place at Apollo Hall, on the night previous, my name is introduced as being one of the signers for reviving the "old Jackson Association." Without intending to Without intending to cast any slur upon the objects of said associafirst intimation I ever had of such a meeting having taken place, or of any intention on my part to participate in the proceedings of any political association whatever, was the above nentioned notice in the American Telegraph. By inserting the above, you will greatly oblige your respectful servant,

L. FITZGERALD TASISTEO. Washington, October 30, 1851.

The name of Mr. Tasistro was very distinctly read by the secretary, and was received with laughter long and loud by the company. Our reporter does not know him personally, but described a person present whom he believed to be Mr. T., as "a portly, florid, good-looking gentleman." The truth of the matter we learn to be, that his name had never been circumscribed with black lines, or expunged, from the old Jackson Association list, but was transferred with other stock in trade to the new organization! Mr. T., however, does not wish to cast any slur upon the meeting; and far be it from that meeting and from us to intentionally cast any slur upon him.

THE NEXT SPEAKER .- The Union of this morning quotes from the Florence (Ala.) Gazette the nomination of General George S. Houston. General H., the Gazette says, has talents peculiarly fitted for the office. He is one of the oldest members in Congress, and is familiar with parliamentary rules and usages.

The Union says: "We have observed that Mr. Richardson, of Illinois, and Mr. Burt, of South Carolina, are avorably spoken of, as possessing, in an eminent degree, the qualities necessary to the dis-charge of the delicate and responsible duties of such a trust. Alabama also thinks of a candidate. General George S. Houston, who, though not in the last Congress, has been previously a very prominent member, has been called from ment by the recent agitations of the South, and represents a part of that old Jackson Democracy which has never failed to be heard with effect when the country was in danger. As he was not a member of the last Congress, we give place cheerfully, in another part of our col-umns, to the views taken of his character and qualifications by the Florence Gazette, one of the staunchest Democratic sheets of the State of Alabama.

The Methodists are about building a Gothic church, of great cost and splendor, in New

SENATOR BRIGHT .- We are gratified at meeting with the following announcement in the Indianapolis Sentinel of the 23d instant:

"We understand that Senator Bright's illness as not paralysis, but was occasioned by a rush of blood to the head—a disease which all per-sons who, like Mr. Bright, are of full habit, are more or less subject to. Mr. Bright, we are happy to state, has entirely recovered.

TRUE !- The New York Tribune states that a full vote is indispensable to the election of the whole Whig ticket." We have frequently seen it so!

THE CIRCUS.-Last night a perfect jam occu-GENERAL SAM HOUSTON .- Read his letter on pied the interior of Johnson & Co.'s pavilion, and the good humor and satisfaction evinced by all present gave proof sufficient of their gratification. The performances in fact, throughout, were of the first order. Messrs. Stout, Dale, Levi, Aymar, and the whole of the equestrian troupe, are decided stars; but the most extraordinary gymnastic feat we have witnessed for sometime past, was the double somerset of Rochford, who, besides, threw somersets over ticelve horses. Jennings and May were at home, and, in short, the whole exhibition, from first to last, was of a superior description.

> THACKERAY .- We thank Mr. Shillington, Odeon Buildings, for a copy of " Sketches and Scenes in Ireland," by this distinguished author and humorist. We anticipate some happy hours in its perusal.

> THE "INTERNATIONAL "-We received from Messrs. Taylor & Maury the November number of this elegant and instructive Magazine.

> "An attempt was made to put up Charles Wallach for president, but, with his accustomed modesty, he declined; so did General McCalla and General Armstrong, but not until they found, in two ballots, that neither of them could compete with Jonas D. Hoover, who was elected on the third ballot.'

> The above remark appears in the columns of the American Telegraph, in its account of the proceedings at the Democratic meeting which took place on Tuesday evening in this city. It is proper to state that General Armstrong is not a member of the Association under the au-thority of which the election referred to was made, nor was any one authorized to put his name in nomination for the Presidency of the Association .- Union of this morning.

> But he was nominated, and by a gentleman who stated that he nominated him upon authority.

CUBA .- The rumor in several of the foreign journals received by the Pacific, that negotiations were in progress for the purchase of Cuba by the British government, is generally regarded as unfounded in fact. One of the Spanish ministers, it is said, favored the proposition, on the ground that the price named—one hundred and fifty millions of dollars—would yield an interest equal to the revenue of the island; and for the further reason that the United States would sooner or later get possession of Cuba, in which case Spain would lose the island without any equivalent. England would hardly venture upon attempting to gain it at the risk of a war with the United States.

THANKSGIVING DAY .- From what we can learn, it is probable that the 27th of November will be the day recommended by the corporate authorities for thanksgiving in Washington. Review of the Northern Markets for
